DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after allowance or after an Office action under Ex Parte Quayle, 25 USPQ 74, 453 O.G. 213 (Comm'r Pat. 1935). Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, prosecution in this application has been reopened pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 3/21/05 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 100-103, 105, 107-108, 115-116, and 120-124 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Wilson et al (Applicant reference in IDS filed 3/21/05).

Art Unit: 1636

Wilson et al teach a yeast expression plasmid (pLAG3110) which comprises a nucleic acid encoding a fusion protein that comprises the lexA DNA binding domain, the NGFI-A (zif268) DNA binding domain which comprises three zinc fingers, and a Gal4 transcriptional activation domain (abstract, page 3719, column 1). The fusion protein reads on a chimeric transcriptional regulatory protein as claimed because it contains two independent heterologous DNA binding domains, at least one of which contains three zinc fingers. Because the two DNA binding domains are complete DNA binding domains, with one or more amino acids not required for DNA binding separating the two domains providing flexibility between the two domains, it would appear that the fusion protein is able to bind to both the lexA DNA binding site and the NGFI-A binding site, and both sites simultaneously, when the two sites are spaced to maximize binding to both DNA binding domains. The two sites together, appropriately spaced, read on a composite nucleotide sequence, and, when optimally spaced to maximize the binding at both domains, would be expected to result in preferential binding of the fusion protein over the binding to a portion of the composite nucleotide sequence. The Gal4 DNA binding domain is a helix-turn-helix domain.

Art Unit: 1636

With regard to the number of amino acids separating the nucleic acid binding domains and the distance between the two domains, in Figure 3 four amino acids are shown between the first zinc finger of the inserted NGFI-A region (amino acids 309-312) and the lexA DNA binding domain, which would result in a distance of less than 10 Å between the domains in the fusion protein.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 104, 106, 117, and 119 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
